

Fluttering to New York by Samantha

Once upon a time there were three butterflies. One of the butterflies, Amy, was cheerful, another butterfly, Elizabeth, was adorable and the last, James, was cute with tiny wings. They wanted to go to New York, so they started to set off.

On the way to the city, a humongous bear passed by. The butterflies didn't know what to do, but then one of the butterflies had an idea, "You know that log over there, we can climb up that and fly off the top" Amy whispered to the others. So they did and the bear didn't get them because they were speeding high up in the air.

As they carried on, a furry scary fox passed by. The butterflies didn't know what to do, but then one of the butterflies had an idea, "Somebody left their frying pan over there, we can trick the fox into biting that, so he knocks his teeth out" said Elizabeth. So they did and the fox couldn't bite them without any teeth.

The butterflies zoomed on towards New York, then in front of them was a large hippo, he was trying to eat them. The butterflies were scared because he was so big and the hippo snorted at them. The butterflies didn't know what to do, but then one of the butterflies had an idea, "There was a hose in somebody's garden, we can make the hippo drink from it then he'll leave to have a wee", called out James. They turned on the hose and the hippo drank the water, then it turned and ran to wee on the ground far away from them.

Just then it started to rain, the butterflies flew as fast as they could. Finally they got to New York but in New York it wasn't raining so they started flying. They found a hotel and went into it, then there was a crash and a bang outside. When the butterflies looked out the window there was a big bad unicorn. The unicorn was destroying New York! The butterflies didn't know what to do, but then all of the butterflies had an idea. We still have the frying pan. We can fly with the frying pan and chase the unicorn with it, then he'll leave and run away forever. So the brave butterflies flew off the roof and swung the frying pan at the Unicorn and saved New York.

The butterflies wanted to fix the broken buildings so one at a time they flew about putting the bricks back onto the buildings. The people of New York city were so happy, one of them said "thank you for fixing my house, but you should know, the statue of liberty is still broken!"

The butterflies swooped down to the Statue of Liberty before it fell and fixed it all up, making a secret butterfly house on the top. The house was all warm and cosy and the butterflies loved it so much that they stayed there forever.

The End.

Bunny and the Butterfly by Armira

Once upon a time there was a rabbit jumping in the grass and lots of butterflies in the air. The rabbit was called Rosie. She saw a very little rabbit and then they played together and were friends. After they saw a castle and they lived in the castle. Then they saw more butterflies coming around the castle. They planted some seeds in the garden and they went back to the castle, and after playing they went to sleep. In the morning, the rabbits went back to the garden to play around the seeds. The little rabbit went to play with his friends. Then the rabbit said it was time to go back to the castle. Then they ate and went to sleep.

The next day they went to the garden. It was a beautiful garden filled with sunshine and flowers. The butterfly had stunning wings with patterns as bright as a rainbow. Hello there chirped Rosie her whiskers twitching with excitement. A butterfly called Bella gently landed on a nearby flower and replied. Hi, I'm Bella! I love dancing in the sunshine and tasting sweet nectar of flowers. Rosie was fascinated by Bella and asked, "Can I fly like you?" Bella smiled and said, "I may not be able to teach you how to fly but I can show you how to enjoy the garden in your own way." From that day on Rosie and Bella became the best of friends you could ever have.

Rosy and the Flower Jobs by Minahil

Once there lived a girl called Rosy. She loved going out on bright sunny bright days and playing with the pink flowers like the roses, daisies, sunflowers and dandelions. One day, her friend Oakley came and she said, "I saw a place that had beautiful flowers such as daisies, roses and all flowers." Rosy really wanted to see the flowers but she had plenty of jobs to do. Then her school teacher said "Come to school! The girl said, "Sure," sadly and on Monday Rosy went to school. She packed up her bag and her fresh water bottle. She did a little bit of learning and for lunch she had a tuna sandwich, wedges and carrots, and also juice for her drink. Then she went back home and her mum said, "It is time for dinner." Next she ate her sausages and fruit. Then she was waiting for a tram and at the tram stop she saw her best friend Oakley. She said, "It's going to be rainy and you'll have time with dead and muddy flowers." Oakley said you need to go quickly before it's going to be blue dropping rain and she went on the tram as fast as she could. Rosy said, "I don't want to be frightened of rain. A while later, rain was dropping and her tears were falling with sadness. She landed in the garden where there were beautiful pink flowers. Rosy said, "Now I need to play with muddy flowers!" She sighed and sighed and sighed. Oakley said, "Good try but bad luck!"

The Lost Pet by Rhea

One stormy night, a fluffy dog got lost. The owner did not know where his cute dog had gone. The owner went home devastated. After, a little girl appeared out of nowhere. She carefully took him to the vet. Later on, the little girl took him to another owner. It was a tall woman. The woman took the dog for a walk. After the fluffy dog ran away to another owner. It was a teenager. The teenager gave the fluffy dog some food to eat. After the teenager gave the dog to a pet shop and then his normal owner bought him. Finally, the fluffy dog was happy again. Everyone should be kind to animals.

The End

The Dinosaurs and the Great Old Cheese by Basam

In the Jurassic era an old wise cheese walked out of a cave, jumped into a car and drove into the land of the dinosaurs. They woke up and stared at him. "You smell like rotten eggs," said the T-Rex. "Why do you have a scarf and a winter jumper in the middle of summer!" "I'm going to a really cold place." "OK," replied the cheese. "May I come?" "But all my dinosaur friends are coming and have all the spaces on the trip. Sorry you can't come," said T-Rex. "OK, never mind. I will go to my cave," replied Cheese. He went to his cave eating eggs and drinking milk so he stays alive or he will make a smelly bomb that stinks so bad the world can't stand it. He ran out of cheese, so he is gone.

A 265 million years later people were living and an astronaut went to space and on Mars was the dinosaur friend and T-Rex living together. They lied to the wise cheese so he wouldn't destroy the planet and that's why they live in space. Everyone went to the planet and they explained they needed food. So the dinosaur chased and ate all the people. One person jumped off the planet and went to Earth. But a velociraptor also went to Earth and ate all the food until Cheese exploded with milk. Velociraptor got buried in a pool with chicken nuggets and ketchup.

No human was left on Mars, no dinosaur was left, no one was left in the entire galaxy.

A Little Soldier by Rafaela

Hi, my name is Timothy but everyone calls me Tim. I am an only child. My mum was a cook and I didn't have a dad. My mum was married to a man called Johnny but he didn't like me and I still don't know why but he was always angry.

I loved soldiers but my mum didn't like them. I wouldn't like to go to war but I did like soldiers. Let me just get on with the story.

In my country, there was a war.

One day, we left the house and my mum didn't tell me where we were going. I thought something was going on. Then we arrived at the train station. From the train I saw my stepdad running towards us. He was waving and saying goodbye. My mum was crying.

After some time on the train, it suddenly stopped. We arrived in the countryside. Someone I didn't know dropped us off in a very small house. We slept there. It was our new home. we lived there. We heard on the news that people were dying in the war.

We had to pay the owner of the house. One morning he knocked on the door and said to use to leave because we couldn't pay to live there anymore. I felt desperate. We didn't have any choice, so we did what we were told. We became homeless. My mum was sick; she was very tired and she couldn't talk a lot. That night we slept on the street. It was so cold and there was no one to help us there.

A few days later my mum and I were sent somewhere else but I didn't know where we were going. I thought we were going back home but instead we went to a work house. That night my mum had to go to hospital, she was very sick. The doctor said she died. I was all alone. What should I do without anyone?

In the work house I had to work hard. The food was bad. The bed had to be shared and that made it difficult to sleep. Children would cry at night. When we went to sleep the work house people locked the doors. So, every night, I looked out of the window and I imagined I was a bird because I would have freedom. I wish I was back to the beginning.

In the work house we had to go to school. there was a kind woman there. She taught us things that we didn't know. Then one day she called me and said that people were coming to get me to fight in the war. I couldn't run away and I didn't have time.

The rest you know: I was only 16 years old when I went to the war.

When the war ended we celebrated. Slowly everything went back to normal. Years passed and now I have children and grandchildren. Now, here I am with you guys.

"Grandpa, Grandpa, I love you!"

The Stinky Rabbit by Daniel Geca

In the middle of a village, in the middle of a park, in the middle of the night, a brown, stinky rabbit was eating dinner. His name was Bunbun. Bunbun loved digging and hiding, everyone knew because he did it every day. Bunbun was very smelly and people in the village called him names.

That night, Bunbun was feeling confused for some reason. But why? He heard a noise and then saw a woman appear. The woman's name was Alice. Alice said, "I wish I could be as beautiful as you." He had happy tears in his eyes. Nobody had ever called him beautiful before in his whole life. He went home with Alice because he was cold and had no friends and she was so kind. Alice had a cat. The cat hated Bunbun. Everytime the cat, whose name was Rudy, saw Bunbun, she scratched him on the face and chased him around the village but Rudy only did it when Alice wasn't looking. Bunbun didn't like it but he loved living with Alice so he didn't tell Rudy off and didn't tell Alice.

One day, Rudy went looking for a good spot to curl up for a long afternoon nap, when suddenly she felt herself falling and everything went black. She realised she was in a badger's den and couldn't climb out. Rudy shouted out for help but couldn't hear anyone. She decided to sleep for a little bit hoping that when she woke up someone might find her.

Back at the house, Alice was starting to worry. She hadn't seen Rudy all day. She knew Rudy loved to find new places to sleep but always came home before it got dark. Bunbun was out too but he often went out digging at night.

Alice went out alone, calling Rudy's name.

Bunbun had been looking for a good space to dig and hide and came across a badger's den. He began digging at the opening.

Rudy woke up and heard a scratching noise above her head. She shouted, "HELP!"

It was Bunbun. Bunbun said, "Rudy, is that you? Alice has been looking for you everywhere! Where have you been?"

"I fell in this hole and I couldn't get out, can you help me?"

"Of course I can...but only if you say sorry about being rude to me and scratching me."

"I'm sorry" said Rudy, "I was jealous because I wanted Alice all to myself"

"That's ok" said Bunbun. He helped Rudy out of the badger's den. Just then the badger came home and chased them away. They ran away laughing. They told each other funny jokes all the way home. Alice was waiting at the front door and was so happy when she saw them - she ran to give them a big hug.

"I am so happy you're home and that you are friends again! Let's celebrate!"

So they had a big party with lots of balloons and cake and they all lived happily ever after.